

I was VERB-ing when it happened (1)

I was taking a shower when you called! (1)

This is to say that you were doing some activity when something else happened

The event happened in the past, but when it did, you were doing some action. So, you need: verb-ing...when...

ex.) I took a shower last night. You called me at that time.

I was taking a shower when you called.

Rewrite these sentences using the ...verb-ing...when... form:

1. I walked home last Saturday. An earthquake hit at that time.

2. Frances ate dinner last night. At that time the police knocked.

3. John talked on the phone while driving. He crashed his car just then.

4. We camped on Saturday. Suddenly a thunder storm came.

5. I rode the train today. During the ride there was an accident.

6. Kim flew to France. During the flight she got the sad news of Tom's death.

7. We watched TV last night. Just then the power went out.

8. Tim scuba dove last year in Guam. Just then he was attacked by a shark!

9. Sue vacationed in Italy. She fell in love during the trip.

10. I ate some raw oysters. Just then I started to feel very sick.

11. Alex played soccer on Sunday. At that time, he injured his leg.

12. I shopped for clothes. I soon realized I didn't have any money.

13. We ate dinner at a restaurant. Just then our car was stolen.

14. Ed walked through the park. At that time, he found a bag of money.
